Add the file to a formData object, and set the Content-Type header to multipart/form-data.

var formData = new FormData();
var imagefile = document.querySelector('#file');
formData.append("image", imagefile.files[0]);
axios.post('upload file', formData, {
    headers: {
      'Content-Type': 'multipart/form-data'

LOG (FormData.Get ("Name")) Look to upload the file, you need to define the request header headers: {'Content Type': 'Multipart / Form-Data'} Ã â¬, axios.post (URL, data) There are only two parameters, or you must configure it as an object Ã¼Å so you must: Axios ({URL: URL, headers: {'content-type': 'Form-date'}, Method: "Post", Data: params}) Check the official documentation for axiosan statements, only familiar axios you will not be confused by "If it doesn't work, you can encapsulate it" encapsulation. Top of AxIOS is also possible, for example: Function request (URL, header, method, param) {return Axios ({URL: URL: Method: Param, headers: header})} // link to vue.prototype.request = request; // you can do this with components like this.Request (URL, NULL, 'Post', FormData) .In ((res) => {// gets the data for the response}) Everything is fine. // If several images are loaded, the file type of the data stored in a 'file []' wire. Know why this is so. OK. After trial and error I learned that the file was not actually saved in the variable "this.state.file". Reload to update your session. I tried the two ways above, but it didn't work for me. // If it is a single image uploaded, then the file type saved in the field name file 'in the can.
